A double event of more than ordipart moment was commemorated on the stay afternoon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Bezaleel W. Taft, 266 Summif threet, who celebrated their golder wedding, and their daughter. Miss Myrta J., was united in matriony with Robert E. Mitchell, in the presence of relatives and a few intimate friends.

The marriage ceremony was performed in the event of the failure on the part of Barstow to comply with the articles of agreement as amended for today. (Wednesday) that he will have to pay a forfeit to the members of the Williaminto Pinochle club, among whose membership are some of the best players in this section of the commonwealth. The martiage ceremony was per-formed at 1.30 o'clock in the parlor, my Rev. J. H. Townsend, rector of St. paul's Episcopul church, Miss May-belle F. Supposed to be trivial.

Mr. Calese on Monday afternoon had driven from Maple avenue with a thirty foot ladder to his place of business on Chestmut street. He drew up to the curb near the Holland slik mills west mill and left his son to watch the borse while he stepped into the office of the Willinantic Lumber and Coal company. During his absence the horse sociame frightened at something and ran away, throwing the lad out upon the street. The box got up and started to walk, but someone had not the file his father, and he carried him home and sent for a physician. The boy became unconscions for a time, but early of the physician, but kept bleeding from the mouth and ears. Dr. Girard is confident that the lad is safering with a ruptured vein in the stomach, and possibly one in the lead as well.

The boy spent a sleepless night, but was more comfortable Tuesday. The boy attributes the horse's fright to a big noise from the mill that was heard shortly after his father left him.

TARIFF TALK By Dr. Edward M. Harris of Providence.

The following interesting comment

well known in Putnam, where he spends his summers: "Last week I offered a few remarks on the trusts. This week I would like to try the tariff, a subject which has been productive of "Double, double, toil and trouble," for it is the first real evil that the oung politicians have to tackle and emolish. It is most vicious about lection time.

"Of course, there have been different opinions on this subject, some think-ing that it is not an unmittgated evil— that it is better to have some relia-ble source of income to meet our avalanche of expenses, which is ever in creasing as it rolls along. Naturally this is a very difficult subject to treat, for there is an endless list of articles imported, and the greatest care and discrimination are called for in adusting the duty to our needs and pro-ection—that is to collect just enough to run our government and so assess it that it shall not injure any of our

"England is quite unique in having practically no import duties, while some of her colonies go the limit the other way. For instance, New Zealand, the much vaunted single tax land, gets three-fourths of her tax receipts from contents and there is no little laft to customs, and there is so little left to collect that she could almost get it by passing around the hat. But England will probably be driven to high tariff soon. She presents a curious specta-cle; she believes very strongly in hereditary government by kings, yet the commons wishes to have absolute con-trol of the finances and is trying to throw overboard the house of lords, which contains the highest hereditary distinction and statesmenship. Surely, her statesmen are in a pitiable pre-dicament, for they are not only dis-tracted by internal dissensions and quarrels, but they are pursued and torn, and tortured by the suffragettes, "But we are told that the tariff is one of the causes of the high cost of living, and so it is; so are all taxes, and the higher we are taxed, so much the higher will be the expense of our living; but if we did not get the funds for running the government from the tariff (and who can suggest a better way?), we should have to get them from some other source; so that it would be only shifting the burden, but Barber scored a beat Tuesday morning. They had the first sleighride of the season in Putnam, whizzing through the streets in the business section before the snow really got our legislators keep up their "high finks" at Washington, there will soon be occasion for revision of the tariff, not downward, but upward."
